PREFACE

FOLLOWING a similar work on Thomas Gray, A CONCORDANCE TO THE POEMS OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH is the second volume to appear under the auspices of The Concordance Society. Of the subvention requested by the publishers, in order to decrease the pecuniary risk attending so large and costly a venture, The Concordance Society has contributed one-third; for a part of the remainder the editor is indebted to the generosity of his mother and his two brothers. It should be added that, in all their dealings with the editor and The Concordance Society, the publishers have shown themselves friendly, in an unusual measure, to the interests of scholarship as represented in this work.

Function of the Concordance. The labour of compiling this index to the language of Wordsworth was begun, and has been finished, in the well-considered belief that, after Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, and Milton, he is the fifth of the great English poets; that the notion of discarding any large section of his writings as if they were of relatively little value, or unnecessary to the comprehension of the rest, is as pestilent an error as the same notion would be if applied to Lucretius or Plato; that a study of the whole is indispensable to an understanding of the parts, and vice versa; that the study of Wordsworth, having passed beyond the stage of naïve appreciation, could not now make any essential advance if a concordance were lacking; and that probably no recent English author has employed so large a vocabulary with so much precision.

The main function of the Concordance is to aid 'the attentive reader', whose coming is anticipated in Wordsworth's Preface to The Excursion, in discovering the vital relation between the longer poems, which are likened to the antechapel and the body of a Gothic church, and the 'minor pieces' which correspond 'to the little cells, oratories, and sepulchral recesses, ordinarily included in those edifices.'

Plan and Execution. The enterprise of this concordance having been announced at a meeting of The Modern Language Association of America in December, 1907, the plan was elaborated by the editor in the following October. A set of 'Instructions to Collaborators'* was drawn up, submitted to the scrutiny both of specialists in the study of Wordsworth and of other competent judges, again rendered as exact and comprehensive as possible, and then, together with the necessary materials, put into the hands of those who had agreed to assist the editor in his undertaking. The Oxford Wordsworth, edited by Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, and bearing the imprint of the year 1907, was adopted as the basic text. Loose sheets of this were obtained in a sufficient number to provide eight complete sets of each allotment of pages; and the work of excerpting was actually begun in November, 1908. The concordance-words were written in the upper left-hand corner of slips of paper of a uniform size (three inches by five); the line of poetry containing each word was cut out of the printed text, and pasted on the corresponding slip; by the use of rubber stamps, the number of the page on which the word and line occur in the text was added in the upper right-hand corner of the slip; by the same device, the title of the poem was indicated in the lower right-hand corner; and then the number of the line was commonly added in script. Cross-references for hyphenated words were made on separate slips.

In this way, it was hoped, a high degree of accuracy would be secured in the copy; for the slips thus prepared were sent to the printer without transcription.

Each collaborator received from one-fortieth to one-eightieth of the Oxford Wordsworth for his share of the text. The editor of the Concordance copied the lines for a number of anomalous passages in the basic text, and also for certain poems which are not contained in the Oxford Wordsworth, but appear in the edition of Mr. Nowell Smith, the Eversley Edition of Professor William Knight, or Professor Knight's Letters of the Wordsworth Family (the choice here being in favour of the text of Mr. Nowell Smith where a choice was possible); and, in addition, he assisted a few of his collaborators who, for one reason or another, were unable to complete their assignments within the time desired.

In most cases, the finished slips for each section of the work were alphabetically arranged before they were returned to the editor, to be incorporated in one main alphabetical list. This final arrangement of all the slips (about 211,000, including the cross-references) was completed before the end of May, 1909, so that the whole task of preparing the copy was accomplished, through careful planning, the division of the burden, the employment of labour-saving devices, and an exceptional spirit of co-operation, in the space of less than seven months. Some delay was encountered in finding a publisher; but this obstacle being suddenly and happily overcome, in part through the kind offices of Mr. Gordon Wordsworth, the printers set to work about the beginning of May, 1910. At the date of this Preface it is two years and three months since the excerpting commenced; had there been no loss of time in discovering the right publisher, the Concordance might have been before the public within eighteen months after its inception.

Collaborators. The following persons freely gave their services in recording the quotations:—

PROFESSOR ARTHUR ADAMS, TRINITY COLLEGE, HARTFORD.
DR. CARROLL S. ALDEN, UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS.
MR. ADOLPH C. BAEBENROTH, SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY.
DR. ELMER J. BAILEY, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. DANE L. BALDWIN, CASCADILLA SCHOOL, ITHACA.
MISS MARY M. BELDEN, ELMIRA COLLEGE.
MISS EDITH BENTLEY, LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.
MR. LESLIE N. BROUGHTON, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. LLEWELLYN BUELL, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
PROFESSOR ALBERT S. COOK, YALE UNIVERSITY.
*MRS. ALBERT S. COOK. (Died December 31, 1908.)
MISS MILDRED E. COOK, NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.
DR. EDWARD G. COX, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MR. WILLARD W. ELLIS, CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.
MRS. WILLARD W. ELLIS, ITHACA.
PROFESSOR ROBERT H. FLETCHER, IOWA COLLEGE.
MR. ALLAN H. GILBERT, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MISS ANTOINETTE GREENE, ELMIRA COLLEGE.
MISS ELSIE L. GWYN, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
DR. JOHN LOUIS HANEY, CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL, PHILADELPHIA.
MISS JULIA HARRIS, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

* The editor will be pleased to give a copy of these 'Instructions' to any one who intends to engage in a similar undertaking.

DR. CHARLES M. HATHAWAY, JR., UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS.
MRS. SAMUEL P. HAYES, SOUTH HADLEY, MASSACHUSETTS.
PROFESSOR CHARLES W. HODELL, GOUCHER COLLEGE, BALTIMORE.
MISS CECILIA A. LAW, ITHACA.
MISS ERNESTINE LAURENCE MILLER, SAYRE INSTITUTE, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.
MISS MARY A. MOLLOY, WINONA SEMINARY, WINONA, MINNESOTA.
MISS MARY MORRISON, NOOKSACK, WASHINGTON.
MISS EDITH J. MUNSELL, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
DR. HERBERT S. MURCH, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.
PROFESSOR IRENE T. MYERS, TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.
PROFESSOR PAUL R. POPE, CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MRS. PAUL R. POPE, ITHACA.
MRS. GEORGE F. REINHARDT, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.
PROFESSOR ROBERT K. ROOT, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY.
PROFESSOR HUBERT G. SHEARIN, TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY, LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.
*MISS EMMA F. SKINNER. (Died September 30, 1910.)
MR. GEORGE S. SPOHN, WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE, WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.
MR. BENJAMIN F. STELTER, THE UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS.
MRS. HENRY L. STEPHENSON, PORTLAND, OREGON.
MISS FRANCES N. STEVENS, NEW BRUNSWICK, NEW JERSEY.
PROFESSOR WILLIAM STRUNK, JR., CORNELL UNIVERSITY.
MRS. WILLIAM STRUNK, JR., ITHACA.
DR. GEORGE B. TENNANT, PATERSON, NEW JERSEY.
MISS MARY REBECCA THAYER, OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
MISS MABEL F. YEOMANS, ONEONTA, NEW YORK.

The most of these persons had no previous experience in the making of concordances. The editor's experience had been limited to a certain amount of proof-reading in connection with the Concordance to Gray.

Alphabetizing. The following persons took part in the final arrangement of the slips:—

MISS ROSE ABEL.
MR. DANE L. BALDWIN.
MRS. MADISON BENTLEY.
PROFESSOR ALBERT S. COOK.
MISS MILDRED E. COOK.
MR. SIDNEY A. COOK.
MR. HOWARD T. FOULKES.
MISS MARGARET FOWLER.
MR. ALLAN H. GILBERT.
MISS ELIZABETH G. HOPPER.
MR. GERARD E. JENSEN.
MR. ALEXANDER C. JUDSON.
MR. JOHN T. MCCANTS.
MISS BESSIE MARRIOTT.
MISS ELIZABETH MERRILL.
MR. SHERMAN B. NEFF.
MR. DOMINIC RUOTOLO.
MR. WILLIAM E. SCHULTZ.
MISS EDITH B. SLOAT.
MISS MARY W. SMYTH.
MR. BENJAMIN F. STELTER.
*MR. WILLIAM S. WHITTLESEY. (Died January 19, 1910.)
MISS FRANCES B. VAN ZANDT.
THE EDITOR.

Proof-reading. The following assisted the editor in the proof-reading:—

PROFESSOR ARTHUR ADAMS.
MISS EMILY H. HALL.
MISS ELIZABETH G. HOPPER.
MISS ROCA LELAND.
PROFESSOR CHARLES G. OSGOOD.
MR. DOMINIC RUOTOLO.
MISS EDITH B. SLOAT.
MISS MARY REBECCA THAYER.
PROFESSOR HUBERT G. SHEARIN.

Quotations. Save in the case of two passages from The Borderers, the quotations from Wordsworth, as in Neve's Concordance to Cowper, consist in every instance of a single line of poetry; care has been taken to preserve any mark of punctuation at the end of a line. The different method of excerpting which was employed in the Concordance to Gray seems not, on the whole, to have produced a much happier result in the way of intelligibility; could not have been so exactly carried out for Wordsworth if the printed text was to be cut and pasted; would inevitably break down if the attempt were made to apply it to the long periodic sentences that are found in The Prelude and The Excursion; and would tend to swell immoderately the size of the work.

Lines 1903–2008 and 2217–2224 of The Borderers are in prose, much of it closely approximating blank verse. For the purposes of the Concordance, it has been assumed that the prose of the first passage gives way to actual verse at line 2009, beginning with 'We are betrayed!' The line-numbering of these two passages being arbitrary, words cited from them are accompanied by what seems to be the most germane bit of context, a part of which may be taken from the line preceding or following.

Omitted Words. No quotations accompany the following words in this Concordance:—

A	BY	HIM	OF	THEIR	US
ALSO	FOR	HIS	OH	THEM	WE
AN	FROM	IF	ON	THERE	WHICH
AND	HAD	IN	OR	THEY	WITH
ARE	HAS	IT	OUR	THIS	YE
AS	HAVE	ITS	OUT	THOU	YOU
AT	HE	NO	SHE	TO	YOUR
BE	HER	NOT	THAT	TOO
BUT	HERE	O	THE	UP

This list is mainly based upon a similar list in the Concordance to Gray, and has its sanction from the practice in Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of The Bible. In the Concordance to Wordsworth, however, it will be observed that the personal pronouns and pronominal adjectives I, ME, MINE, and MY, which are of unusual interest in a subjective poet, are not included in the list of omissions, but belong in another category, which is indicated by the term Partial List. The attempt has been made to include all the occurrences of these four words that have any special significance in connection with the poet.

Partial Lists. In order to lessen the cost of publication, only some of the occurrences of each of the following words have been recorded:—

ABOUT	EVEN	NEITHER	THOSE
ABOVE	EVER	NEVER	THOUGH
AFTER	EVERY	NOR	THRO'
AGAIN	FORTH	NOW	THROUGH
AGAINST	'GAINST	O'ER	THUS
AH	HADST	OFF	THY
ALL	HAST	OFT	TILL
ALONG	HATH	OFTEN	'TILL
ALTHOUGH	HE'S	ONCE	'TIS
AM	HIMSELF	ONE	'TWAS
AMID	HOW	ONLY	'TWERE
AMONG	HOWEVER	OURS	'TWILL
ANY	I	OVER	UNDER
AROUND	I'D	OWN	UNTIL
ART	I'LL	ROUND	UPON
AWAY	I'M	SAID	VERY
BEEN	INDEED	SAY	WAS
BEFORE	INTO	SAYS	WERE
BEHIND	IS	SHALL	WE'RE
BELOW	IT'S	SHALT	WERT
BENEATH	ITSELF	SHE'S	WHAT
BETWEEN	I'VE	SHOULD	WHEN
BOTH	LESS	SHOULDST	WHENCE
CAN	LET	SO	WHERE
CANNOT	LIKE	SOME	WHETHER
CANST	MAY	STILL	WHILE
COULD	MAY'ST	SUCH	WHO
COULDST	ME	TH'	WHOM
DID	MID	THAN	WHOSE
DO	'MID	THAT'S	WHY
DOES	MIGHT	THEE	WILL
DONE	MIGHT'ST	THEIRS	WILT
DOST	MINE	THEN	WITHIN
DOTH	MORE	THENCE	WITHOUT
DOWN	MOST	THEREFORE	WOULD
EACH	MUST	THERE'S	WOULDST
E'ER	MY	THESE	YES
EITHER	MYSELF	THINE	YET
ERE	NE'ER	THO'	YOURS

The formation of such a list is to some extent arbitrary. The quotations for most of these words were recorded by two of the more experienced and rapid workers, Professor Arthur Adams and Mrs. George F. Reinhardt, whose sections of text, as it happens, were not very characteristic in their substance, though interesting for their peculiarities of syntax. A valuable collection of similes is included in the quotations under the word LIKE. The references to WERE are restricted to the use of this word as a proper name.

Concordance-titles. In order to facilitate the use of the Concordance by persons who may not own the Oxford Wordsworth, it has been necessary to employ no fewer than 728 combinations of words in italics to indicate the titles of the poems. The selection of these catch-titles was very difficult. Wordsworth is often so circumstantial in naming his poems that no significant catchword is discernible; in other cases, the poems have no names; in others, two poems have the same name, or names very similar. In still others, it was found that two or more of the editors of Wordsworth, who give an alphabetical list of titles, had not hit upon the same catchword for their arrangement. For various reasons, therefore, it has often been necessary to refer to a poem by words enough from the opening line to identify it in such an index of first lines as the recent editions of this poet contain. Though some of the concordance-titles may seem unfamiliar or awkward, it must not be supposed that the choice of them was made at random; there is a reason for the particular form in virtually all cases.

Variants. No truly exhaustive collection of the variant readings in the successive editions of Wordsworth's text has ever been published. The editor of the Concordance, having solicited advice from those who were most able to give it, was confirmed in his opinion that he ought not to attempt a labour which would greatly delay the appearance of the whole work, as well as materially increase a pecuniary outlay already becoming formidable. In general, therefore, variant readings have not been recorded, with the exception of those which are included in the standard text of Mr. Hutchinson. In the case of one stanza in each of the poems referred to as Dion, Duty, and Louisa, the variant quotations were provided with no line-numbers in the Concordance, because of the confusion which would otherwise result through the similar numbering of contiguous passages in the same text. The variants in There was a Boy (Oxford Wordsworth, p. 183), and similar extracts from The Prelude (pp. 89, 186, 208), have been noted according to the page, but otherwise the quotations in these extracts are referred to their place in the complete poem; Vaudracour and Julia, however, has been treated in all respects as a separate work, so that there are a few unimportant repetitions as between this and The Prelude, Book 9. In the case of An Evening Walk and Descriptive Sketches, it has been the intention that the final text should be fully recorded; and, for the first or 'Quarto' editions of these poems, the purpose has been to include quotations only for those lines which show a verbal difference from the final text—not merely a difference in the use of capital letters or marks of punctuation. Yet differences in the compounding of words by means of a hyphen have been noted, as well as a few anomalous forms like IT'S. The delicate task of recording the variants in the 'Quarto' editions of these two poems was entrusted to Professor Robert K. Root, of Princeton University.

Concerning The Recluse, Book First, Part First, it is to be observed that the Concordance accepts the readings of the Eversley Edition in matters of spelling and punctuation, as far as and including line 753, and that the line-numbering of quotations from the extracts published by Wordsworth and his nephew follows that of the canto as a whole. Verbal differences in the Oxford Wordsworth are noted, however, and all the quotations from these extracts are referred to their proper pages (pp. 218, 621, 622, 755) in this text. The text of the Eversley Wordsworth as far as line 753 is said to be based upon a new and careful examination of the original manuscript. From line 754 the text of the quotations in the Concordance is that of the Oxford Wordsworth, and the page-number (755) of this edition is preserved, but the line-numbering, again, is that of the canto as a whole.

Variants and Additional Poems. Of the ostensibly new material from Wordsworth which has been printed by Mr. Nowell Smith and Professor Knight, it must be said that these passages have come before the public in spite of such utterances as the poet is known to have made to Alexander Dyce: 'You know what importance I attach to following strictly the last copy of the text of an author' (Letters of the Wordsworth Family 2. 420). Concerning his adaptations from Juvenal he wrote to Francis Wrangham: 'The verses which you have of mine I should wish to be destroyed' (1. 253). But where recognized editors have shown the way, the maker of a concordance has little choice but to follow. As a result, the present work admits a full list of quotations from these additional sources, even in certain cases where Mr. Nowell Smith and Professor Knight have not clearly differentiated between fresh discoveries and mere variants, or additional or rejected manuscript passages of poems already known. The present writer has discussed several of these cases in Notes and Queries during the autumn of 1910.

One sonnet, attributed to Wordsworth, and published in The Home Journal, New York, October, 1847, is referred to in the Concordance without an accompanying page-number, by the title A sad*.

Homographs. This work makes no pretence of uniting the functions of a lexicon with those of a concordance pure and simple. A lexical concordance to Wordsworth, with an equal number of references, would require a volume probably one-third or one-half as large again as the present. As in the Concordance to Gray, in a few cases only has a distinction been indicated in the meaning of different words which are spelled in the same way. Where such a distinction is made, the attention of the reader will be called to it by a departure from the normal ordering of references according to page-numbers, the form having the fewer references being put first under the common head-word. Under CAN, for example, the quotations containing the noun precede those containing the auxiliary verb; and the case is similar with MUSIC, the name of a dog, and MUSIC, a common noun.

Cross-references. When two or more verbal elements are compounded in the text of Wordsworth by means of a hyphen, the occurrences of the entire word are arranged in their proper place in the alphabet, and cross-reference is made to this whole word from the second element, or second and third elements, of the compound, except in most cases where these elements, being particles and the like, would as single words fall under the rule of partial or complete omissions.

Wordsworth, however, seems to be very inconsistent in the use of the hyphen: within the limits even of a short poem he may print the same combination of elements as a single word and as a compound (see, for example, the references to GREENHOUSE, GREEN-SWARD, NOONTIDE); or he may join the same elements with a hyphen at one time, and at another print them as separate words (compare BATTLE, BATTLE-FIELD, LITTLE, LITTLE-ONE, and various combinations under COTTAGE and MOUNTAIN). He is also at times inconsistent in his spelling (see CRECY, CRESSY, FORBODE, FOREBODE). It is improbable that all of these variations have been discovered in the proof-reading. And though an attempt has been made to normalize the cross-references in page-proof, it has been impossible to obtain a complete uniformity in this matter; for one thing, the unusual demands upon particular fonts have made it necessary that the earlier letters of the alphabet should be printed off, in order to release the type for later ones. Moreover, the editor is doubtful whether any system could have been devised which should exactly provide for all of these petty abnormalities. As the industrious Cruden remarked in his second preface: 'Though it be called . . . "A Complete Concordance", poor sinful man can do nothing absolutely perfect and complete, and therefore the word "complete" is only to be taken in a comparative sense.'

Errors in the Basic Text. In the preparation of this

Concordance, the following errors have been noted in the basic text:—

108 Indolence 31, read Than for Then
209 Laod. 4, read required: for required
245 P. B. 775, read Bell. for Bell
789 Excursion 3. 194, read " One for " One
858 Excursion 7. 87, read fortune-telling for foretune-telling.

In some few instances, the word sic, or a mark of interrogation, or a word which should be substituted, has been inserted in brackets in the text of a quotation, in order to draw the attention of the reader to an abnormality; but the paramount aim has been to reproduce with the utmost fidelity the text of Wordsworth as it appears in the editions which have been quoted.

It only remains for the editor to express his sense of deep obligation to all those persons who by their advice, or direct participation in the labour, have aided in the advancement of this work. To Professor Albert S. Cook, President of The Concordance Society, both for counsel in the planning and manifold help in the making, the volume owes a debt too extensive to be well expressed. And from Professor William Strunk, Jr., of Cornell University, the editor has received endless assistance in difficulties both small and great. Mr. George William Harris, the Librarian of Cornell University, provided the manuscript of the Concordance with a place of safe-keeping for the better part of a year. To Miss Elizabeth G. Hopper, of the Library of Congress, Miss Mary Rebecca Thayer, of Oakland, Maryland, Miss Edith B. Sloat, of Ithaca, and Mr. Dominic Ruotolo, of the Yale University Library, special thanks are due for a devotion to the interests of the Concordance which has been quite incommensurate with the compensation which they received for their labours.

LIST OF TITLES

[The following is an alphabetical list of the catchwords used in this Concordance to designate titles or first lines in the Poetical Works of Wordsworth. The full titles which here accompany the catchwords are taken, as far as possible, from the Table of Contents in the Oxford Wordsworth; and the page-numbers v, 1–756, indicate the pages in the Oxford Wordsworth on which the poems begin. S. 3, with a page-number, refers to Nowell Smith's edition, Volume 3; K. 8, with a page-number, to Knight's Eversley Wordsworth, Volume 8; and similarly L. 1, L. 2, and L. 3, refer to the three volumes of Knight's Letters of the Wordsworth Family. A preceding asterisk signifies that the catchwords are taken from the first line of a poem; a dagger, that the poem, although included in his works by Wordsworth, is by another hand, for example, that of his sister; and a mark of interrogation, that the ascription of the poem to Wordsworth is to some extent doubtful.]
